The Father of Radio

Dr. Lee deForest, whose great contribution to radio, the three-element vacuum tube, opened the door to history. Practically everything in radio is in some manner a result of his invention.

This is a private photograph of the Doctor, presented <sup>in 1910</sup> to his friend and Chief Engineer, Ignatius H. McCarty, co-inventor of the McCarty Wireless Telephone.

Urgent:

This is the only photo of its kind in existence and is highly prized by its holder, Mr. McCarty. It is imperative that the original be returned to H.W.Dickow as soon as a copy or engraving of it is made.
